APPRAISING "ISLAND" At VALLEY ENTRANCE

A three-man committee of realtors is currently making an appraisal of the "island" property at the entrance to Carmel Valley, it was revealed this week during a board meeting of Carmel Unincorporated.

The appraisal is a step toward ultimate purchase of the site for establishing a public park at the valley gateway. Corum Jackson, president of the Carmel Realty Board, appointed the following men to make the appraisal: Arthur T. Shand, Kenneth Woods and Major R. C. Gibbs.

During the board meeting this week, Dr. A. L. Van Meter reported that several maps have been prepared showing proposed improvements of the property. The following persons have aided in preparing the maps: Mrs. Frances Wallace, Mrs. Lester Rountree, Herbert Seipel, W. L. Cranston, W. Harvey Williamson and Dr. Van Meter.

Carmel Unincorporated, having waged a year-long fight to keep commercialization out of the valley entrance, is now seeking to establish a public park there with the aid of members of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors and the County Planning Commission.

With a general meeting of Carmel Unincorporated coming up on Tuesday at 4 p.m. in Carmel High School cafeteria, it was noted at the board meeting that several important matters will be discussed.

An engineer from the Carmel Sanitary District will outline the proposed sewer project at Hatton Fields, according to Tom Perry. It was noted that several residents of Upper Hatton Fields are opposed to the sewer installation and their arguments may be heard during the Tuesday meeting.

Mr. Perry also reported that the cost of the sewage installation will be about $7 per running foot, which represents a 20 percent cut from the original estimate.

Other matters to be taken up at the general meeting include discussion of a road sign at the entrance to Hatton Fields on Highway 1, increased police patrols in the unincorporated areas and the establishment of Scenic Drive on Carmel Point as a one-way road.

CARMEL POLICE WARN AGAINST USE OF FIREWORKS

The Carmel Police Department has issued its usual annual warning against the purchase, possession or use of fire crackers in this area.

Chief Roy Fraties said yesterday morning that cap pistols are still all right for Carmel's small fry, but other types of fireworks are definitely prohibited and the Police Department will be on the lookout for violators from now until the Fourth of July.

SET BOARD MEETING DATES

Board meetings of the Carmel Women's Club will be held on the third Thursday of each month, it was decided last week when Mrs. F. E. Vaughan, president, met with her new board of directors.

Willow Dominy was elected commander of Monterey Cypress Post, American Legion, during a meeting last week. Other new officers include Helen Oster, first vice commander; Clara Schlutter, second vice commander; Mary Lloyd McEwen, finance officer; Ann Hackbarth, chaplain; Yaeko Suyama, historian; Caroline Martin, service officer, and Rosemary Vincent, sergeant-at-arms.

Ellen Joy Day was reappointed to the position of adjutant.

SOROPTIMISTS SCHEDULE HUNT BALL FOR MONTEREY COUNTY FAIR

The Monterey Peninsula Soroptimists Club will hold a Hunt Ball during the Monterey County Fair, it was announced this week by President Mrs. Thomas De Lay, of Monterey. Suggested by Mrs. Wilma Campbell, the ball may become an annual event, the Soroptimists hope.

Although a place has not been selected as yet, the ball will probably be held on September 1.

Y-TEEN CONFERENCE AT ASILOMAR

Three hundred and forty two delegates from the Y-Teen Clubs of the Western states and Hawaiian Islands are meeting this week at Asilomar, Western Area YWCA conference grounds.

The theme of the conference

this year is "Y-Teens, Let's Be Creative." In the discussion and forum groups the girls will carry out this theme in building a personal philosophy in family relationships, in groups outside the family.

Reverend Danford Lion, Unitarian minister of Palo Alto, led the forum group on Tuesday. His subject was "Let's be creative--within ourselves." The topic for Wednesday was "Let's be creative--in relationships with our family and friends," led by Mrs. Richard Saunders, Dean of Women at Palos Verdes College, Palos Verdes, Calif.

Miss Roberta Chapman, of Los Angeles, is conference executive. A full and varied program of recreational activities has been planned for the teenagers every afternoon and evening.

Resort Owners Want Better Detour

The Carmel Valley Resort Owners Association met Wednesday to elect officers and to discuss the new detour on the Carmel Valley Road between the Tice Ranch and Rancho Las Fiestas.

Phil Wilson was elected president of the group; Paul Porter, vice president, and Herb Brook, secretary-treasurer.

It was decided during the meeting that the organization would ask for an extension of the by-pass which was built this week around the dangerous construction area eight miles out the valley. Members feel that the present by-pass still isn't adequate for the traffic it must bear.

The detour was not built in the right place, being on the north side of the Carmel River rather than on the south side, where an oldtime quarry road existed years ago. The present detour is not suitable for trucks because of the narrow approach at the eastern end through the Rancho Fiesta property.

With an attitude that the detour should have been constructed "long ago," the resort owners said they would seek "a better detour than the one that is already in."

The present detour was constructed following a SPECTATOR editorial and a meeting between resort owners and engineers working on the road project. The resort owners reported they had lost "thousands of dollars" since construction on the road had started holding up traffic.

ANNOUNCE ENGAGEMENT

The engagement of Elizabeth P. Beardslee to Virgil Trebbian, of Los Angeles, was announced this week. They will be married some time in October. Miss Beardslee, a frequent visitor to Carmel, is the brother of Dick Beardslee, who resides here.

AT TAHOE

Mike McClure, of Carmel, left Sunday for Lake Tahoe, where he will spend the Summer.

$11,000 RAISED for BEACHES

Almost $11,000 has been raised toward public acquisition of the Carmel River Beach and lagoon, it was announced this week by Francis Whitaker, president of the Point Lobos League, the organization behind the drive. A goal of $25,000 has been set by the group, to be matched with state and county funds. This would bring a total of $100,000 for the project.

Horace D. Lyon, treasurer of the Point Lobos League, reported on Monday that the group now has $7,003.16 in the beach fund, with an additional sum of about $3,500 expected from the Carmel Art Association and Carmel Crafts Guild, which staged the recent "save the beaches" party at Mission Ranch. A total of $639.25 has been collected for an expense fund for the drive, Mr. Lyon said, with unused portions of this fund to go into the general fund.

"Not counting the numerous persons who purchased tickets to the local art group party, between 500 and 600 persons have contributed toward the drive," Mr. Lyon declared. "The popularity of the drive will be a major factor in getting matching funds from the state and county."

The "save the beaches" campaign was started by the Point Lobos League during February after it was learned that proposed commercial development south of Carmel threatened the natural scenic beauty along the shore.

LIONS CLUB TO INSTALL OFFICERS TUESDAY NIGHT

The Carmel Lions Club will hold installation of officers Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Mission Ranch. Taking over as president for the coming year is Ted Fehring.

Other officers include Oscar Balzer, first vice president; Art Wise, second vice president; Mike Balazs, secretary-treasurer; Colonel Roy Hillier, assistant secretary-treasurer; Louis Poulous, tail twister, and Floyd Smith, lion tamer. Directors include Lyle Cooper, Joe Hudder, Vincent Torras and Muriel Ogden.

MANY ARTISTS ENTERING STATE FAIR ARTS AND CRAFTS EXHIBIT

Early entries and the demands for the premium list booklets indicate that the Arts and Crafts exhibit during the celebration of the State's 100th Birthday at the California State Fair in Sacramento, August 31 through September 10, will be the greatest in the history of the fair.

Entries in all of the 36 sections of the exhibit are pouring in daily. Many of the outstanding artists and craftsmen of the state have already sent in entry blanks and the various media of their handiwork.

So great has been the demand for premium booklets that a second printing has already been made to satisfy the constant inquiries of exhibitors.

A total of $15,000 in cash premiums is offered for winners in oil paintings, water colors, sculpture, prints, ceramics, metal work, jewelry, handwoven textiles and photography.

All entries except in photography are limited to living California artists and craftsmen. The closing date for entry blanks and works of art is 5 p.m., July 17.

Once Upon a Time

By Alexander Victor

BACK AGAIN

Reminds me of the little boy whose father was a traveling salesman who came home only when he could. The little boy, seeing him come up the stairs, ran to his mother and said; "Ma, that man's here again."

I had planned to write about the flying cups and saucers. But that appears to be a dead issue-- as I knew it would be after those who claimed to have seen them had their names in small print.

Years ago there was great excitement in Boston where people claimed to have seen an airship over the city at night. The ship was said to have had portholes which were brightly illuminated.
Great excitement indeed. This was a few years before Santos Dumont flew around the Eiffel Tower and Dieriot across the English Channel.

THE ATOMIC BOMB

Here is something that claims everyone's attention. In this week's Collier's Magazine there is an article by David E. Lilienthal. It is called "Free the Atom." I don't think that is a good idea. A couple of years ago I read with great care
a book by a Russian named Gamow.
It was a wonderful book entitled "Atomic Energy in Cosmic and Human Life." It was written so I couldn't understand it.

But I learned this from the book. You cannot outrun an atom.
Free the dam thing indeed. I'm not sure this minute about the speed of the atom itself, but those nasty little things called electrons that are located within the atom race around at something like a million miles per hour--more or less. I am never really accurate--but it is something like that, and while I've never tried it I'm sure I can't run that fast. All you have to do, according to Gamow, is to shoot a lot of alpha particles at a lot of atoms, which I understand are everywhere. You crack the atom and let out the little things that won the war for us with Japan. The Japanese immediately laid down and cried uncle. I have no uncle but I would definitely do the same thing. If Lilienthal can persuade the government to change its present attitude in the matter of governmental control of atom experimentation, you and I and all the other billionaires may be permitted to work out gadgets that will send an ocean liner across the seas, while using a power unit which you can put in your pocket--however, your pocket, not mine.

The real problem is, where will we obtain our raw materials. I now quote from Gamow: "Thus we come to the general conclusion that the best opportunity for producing atomic transformations and liberating their hidden energy lies on the two opposite ends of the periodic system. It must be either the heavier isotope of hydrogen: deuterium;
or the lighter isotope of uranium, U235, both of which are, unfortunately, extremely rare on the earth."

With a final word I will say that Mr. Lilienthal may be right.
If your government will allow free experimentation of atomic possibilities, it is possible that someone, not I, and I hope not you, will hit upon some material which is plentiful and cheap. We may need it after we have burned up all the coal in the world and all the gasoline and after we reach a three or four billion population instead of the present measly two billions.

Well, more power to you, Mr. Lilienthal. And more power for the world.

Let us turn to more important things. Ever since that highly humorous article about me written for the Monterey Peninsula Herald by Barney Norris and in which he gave away my darkest secret of having at one time been a magician, Tex, at the Pine Inn bar, has not been the same man. It appears that he has had ambitions to do magic.
We have arrived at an amicable arrangement under which I will teach him one trick for every free drink he will give me. Poor Mr. Miller-- and poor me. For a bottle of champagne I will teach Tex the Howard Thurston levitation trick and he could have beautiful girls floating above and around the bar. The increased business would probably repay Mr. Miller for the cost of the drinks.

Speaking of tricks, and especially card tricks, reminds me of a story I used to tell with very good success a few years ago. I told it with a southern accent and several people said it was the best Southern-Swedish accent they had ever heard.

In a little town in Kentucky
there was a Saloon. Back of the Saloon was a room where the local gentry gathered evenings to play Poker. (Note, I always spell Saloon and Poker with a capital letter.) At any rate, there was a Kentucky Colonel who was one of the most ardent players of that noble and ancient American game.

Whenever luck would go against him he would call out to the bartender, "Joe, bring me a fresh deck of cards." He would then open the deck, after removing the government labels and wrappers.
He only did this when there were out-of-town suckers such as traveling men and that ilk. It goes without saying that the Colonel had a private arrangement with Joe and was given a prepared deck.
It happened, however, that there had been a shortage of strangers and the Colonel, getting bored and impatient, pulled his stunt on the local boys. This they resented and made a deal with Joe all their own. They obtained some glue and smeared this all around the deck.
After the glue had dried the deck was replaced in the original wrapper.

A few days later some strangers with a lot of money blew into the little town and were invited to a Poker game that same night. The colonel smelled money and went through his usual performance of tearing up the deck and asking for a new one. "Damn such unlucky cards," he said, as with great ostentation he removed the government label and the wrapper. Then, as his usual habit, he "riffled"
the cards. Nothing happened. A look of horror came over his face
as he glanced down at the cards.

"Gentlemen," he said. "For five and forty ye-ars I have been in the habit of ringing in cold decks on suckers. But, gentlemen," he continued, "as God above is my witness, this is the first time one of the damn things froze on me."

It appears that a list was published a few days ago giving the names of those who live on the Peninsula and who are listed in Who's Who. Quite a number of people have asked me why my name was omitted and I take this occasion to explain the omission. The Marquis Company, the publishers, are very thorough in investigating people and their careers, but, they are also very reasonable, and if you request to have your address omitted, they will do so. In my case, this was requested and was granted. My reason for having this done, of course, was to baffle my creditors.

MISS HALL FLIES TO NEVADA

Miss Patricia Lenore Hall, of LaRana, Carmel, left by Southwest Airways last Saturday morning for a month's visit with relatives in Lovelock, Nevada. This was Miss Hall's first trip by air.

When she returns in July, Patricia will go to Camp Terrisita at Bass Lake for another three weeks before entering Carmel High School this fall.

On the afternoon Patricia left, her 11-month old Afghan puppy, the Baron, caused quite a furor in the family by deciding to go out looking for her. It took two men and a woman to catch up with him and bring him back home. Afghans are noted for their speed and agility, for they were originally trained to hunt leopards and gazelles.

O'NEILL PLAYS ENACTED MOVINGLY

Although the opening performance last week of Eugene O'Neill's "The S.S. Glencairn" had none of the glowing excitement of The Wharf Players' "Happy Birthday," three of the four sea plays were enacted movingly by the local performers. Bruce Ariss, as the tough, sentimental and sometimes happy-go-lucky Driscoll, came off as the best actor. His performance was consistently topnotch.

Unfortunately, the first act, "Moon of the Caribbees," was not up to the standard of the remaining portions of the show. It's hard to say why this seemed to be true, unless it was because the act started slow and never got going fast enough. Appearing onstage cold and striving to act raucous and drunk in proper seafarin' manner, with the added onus of establishing about six different dialects, is a real task. One and maybe two performances were weak enough in this act to make the audience uncomfortable, but by now the show's excellent director, Dan Tothoroh, should have smoothed things out.

Incidentally, the first act found Carmel's Victor Brune in the part of the calm Donkeyman. His performance was very assured and competent and provided smooth relief from the frantic posturings of O'Neill's other characters.

The remainder of the play - and what seems to be the most important part - was excellent. "Bound East for Cardiff," "In the Zone," and "The Long Voyage Home" were as heartbreakingly human as the author must have intended them to be. In these acts, strong portrayals were given by Clay Somers, as the dying Yank, Cole Weston, as love-bitten Smitty, Bill Fort, as Davis, Kenn Smith, as Joe, the grasping saloon-keeper, and Fred Chapman, as a Peter Lorre-like Nick. George McElroy, playing Scotty, showed that he is a "natural actor."

Of the four women in the play, Patty Trevvett, who played two roles, gets the gold medal from this department. Very good indeed, however, were Dee Olivetti, Carmen Mercante and June Cabrera who is beautiful as well as spit-firish in her part.

Alex Merivale had a tough role as Cocky. He seemed a bit strained in the first act, but improved steadily through the show and was excellent in the last act. This last act, "The Long Voyage Home," was notable for a standout performance by Bill Ingalls, as Olson, the gentle Swedish seaman who is shanghaied just before leaving the sea forever.

The O'Neill plays do not teach any lessons, but they create mood and the local group was very successful in showing this. Major credit in carrying the action goes to Bruce Ariss.

Our hat is off once again to Mr. Tothoroh, the director.

SCALE MODEL HOME ON DISPLAY AT BANK OF CARMEL

Creating quite a stir is the wonderfully detailed scale model home now being exhibited in the lobby of the Bank of Carmel. It is a home planned for construction at Yankee Point Acres, the first subdivision to be opened on the Carmel Riviera, five miles down the coast from Carmel.

Hundreds of customers of the bank stop and sigh as they see the possibilities of living in such a home, planned for its location. The house has been designed by Clarence W. Mayhew, AIA, a San Francisco architect, recently featured in national magazines. Mr. Mayhew spent much of his youth in Carmel and has a love and feeling for the locale.

Bids for the construction of the home are now being figured by local contractors and Charles G. Sawyer, manager of Yankee Point Acres, says he hopes to have building under way before long.

One of the basic cravings of human nature is the desire to be different.

We want our homes to look different from our neighbors'. We want to dress differently, and to express our individuality in the hundred and one details of our lives.

Perhaps you never thought of this before, but one of the principal reasons you are able to gratify this desire is the wide freedom of choice provided by America's system of brand names and advertising.

Under this system, which encourages keen competition, American brand manufacturers carefully study your needs, and then cater to your individual tastes and requirements.

In no other country of the world are consumers offered the variety of brands that are available in America. If you visit a store and fail to find exactly what you are looking for, you can be sure that some other store has the brand you want.

And just as no one brand can be all things to all people, neither can one store be all things to all people. Since some of your needs are highly specialized, Monterey Peninsula towns and shopping areas have many stores which specialize in certain types of goods to make YOUR SHOPPING QUICKER AND MORE CONVENIENT, and at standard prices.

But no matter what brand you buy, or where you buy it, always remember to look carefully for the name or trademark of the maker. A maker's name that has won public confidence by consistently standing for good quality, style and value is a quick and sure guide to reaching a sound buying decision.

This summer, printed materials have regained favor with all the couturiers of Paris. Before the war no wardrobe was complete without a print dress or suit; and, without fail, the month of May had flowers blooming in the gardens, parks and on women's dresses all over Paris. With the war, the difficult textile-industry-situation and the rationing of goods, the printed materials vanished from the market. In spite of the end of rationing, when everything was plentiful again, printed silks did not regain their popularity. After the Liberation, women asked for polka-dots and stripes.

But this summer the French couturiers made the little printed dress "star" of their collections. But they were careful to retain exclusive features. Pierre Balmain specializes in reproducing the "dessins-de-surface," the spots on Stars David Brian (left) and John Agar rehearse a scene from the Warner Brothers production "Breakthrough" aboard the Navy transport "Thomas Jefferson" in Monterey Bay. Fort Ord personnel from the 8th Infantry Regiment are being featured as soldiers of the 1st Army in the film which portrays the invasion of Normandy and the subsequent St. Lo campaign. The motion picture is being made almost in its entirety on the Fort Ord reservation and adjacent areas. Shooting will continue on the Lew Seiler directed production for approximately one month. U.S. ARMY PHOTO.

MAKE BELIEVE BATTLEFIELD BOOMING AT FORT ORD

Warner Brothers Studio is still on location at Fort Ord, but the U.S. Navy got into the act last Wednesday when "pre-invasion" scenes in the production "Breakthrough" were filmed aboard the Navy transport "Thomas Jefferson" in Monterey Bay. "Breakthrough" tells the story of one platoon's part in the bloody St. Lo campaign.

Men from the 8th Infantry Regt., Fort Ord, are giving authenticity to combat soldier roles in the film, and in Wednesday's sequences off "Omaha Beach" (Fisherman's Wharf, that is!) they were ready to hit the beach with full field pack and helmet.

While cameras ground away aboard the "Jefferson," the men of the 8th provided the tense background atmosphere for the "landing" as they paced the deck and stared shoreward at the looming "beachhead."

During another scene, the Fort Ord infantrymen, their foreheads beaded with the best perspiration that glycerine and the Warner Brothers make-up man could produce, scrambled down landing nets as if their lives depended upon it.

Portly, gray-haired director Lew Seiler, a stickler for realism in all his pictures, insisted in showing the exact degree of strain and exhaustion required in the net scene by climbing down the net himself.

David Brian and John Agar are the stars of the film.

ANSWER TO THIS WEEK'S

WHO IS IT?

John Boit Morse, president of Del Monte Properties Co., is featured in this week's "Who Is It?" Born in San Francisco in 1910, Mr. Morse has been a resident of this area since he was two years old. His father, Samuel F. B. Morse, came to the peninsula in 1912 as manager of the old Pacific Improvement Co., later starting the present Del Monte firm. A resident of Pebble Beach, John Morse was educated in the East at St. Paul's School and at Yale University where he received his AB degree in 1934. He married the former Margaret McLennan that same year and they now have two children: Peter and Richardson. Starting his business career as an account executive for Lord & Thomas, he became vice president of Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample in 1941, taking over as president of Del Monte in 1945. He served four and one-half years as a line officer with the Navy during the recent war and was released to inactive duty as a commander. Mr. Morse, incidentally, was the founder and first president of the Monterey Peninsula Navy League. He also is past president of the Community Chest, a director of the Monterey Boys Club and a member of the Monterey Planning Commission. His clubs include Monterey Peninsula Country Club, Cypress Point, Pacific Union Club and the New York Racquet and Tennis Club. Currently he enjoys golf, tennis and riding, but for 25 years he was a crack hockey player, not only in college but as a semi-professional in Chicago. A director of many firms and civic groups, Mr. Morse at the age of 39 has assumed responsibilities that would make many older pause, yet his good-natured personality has secured for him the liking and respect of all who know him.

LOSS OF CONFIDENCE

Abundant confidence in the external world can be found normally only in children. Faith diminishes with the years and experiences accumulated from a more or less hostile world. However a significant quantity of faith remains in the normal human being to guarantee a sufficient measure of happiness. Confidence in others, or faith, signifies the quasi surrender to another person without being able to predict the outcome. Faith is always somewhat of a daring leap into uncertainty.

The importance of confidence in human life becomes apparent when we see the tragic consequences which result from losing it. Loss of faith disguises itself psychologically with many weird and grotesque masks, such as tormenting restlessness, gnawing discontentment, general nervousity, aching loneliness, painful uncertainty and, or, tensions of various kinds. A person suffering from these things resembles a man mired in quicksand and unable to drag himself free. He needs psychotherapeutic help for he is so entangled in the web of his own problems that he is unable to see the essential causes of his unhappiness.

As an example, one day a young man came to me. He was 25 years old, slim and strong, very talented and an outstandingly good tennis player. When he returned from the war he took up tennis again, but try as he would, he could never recover his former skill at the game. He made a terrific concentrated effort, expending a lot of energy, biting his lips bloody in the process, with the discouraging and weary repetition of failure after failure. He became more and more tense, nervous and desperate and his university grades got worse. He even got involved in a love affair, confused by the fact that he could never quite decide whether he loved or hated this woman. He lost his self confidence and was completely mixed up.

The beginning of the treatment was rather difficult as he was so blocked up within himself. The ice was broken by a dream ("the royal road to the unconscious"). This was the dream: "I was playing cards with two very good friends of mine. I lost constantly and it was clear to me that these two were cheating but I could never figure out how they did it. When I got up to leave, the two smiled ironically and one of them said, 'You must have forgotten that we were playing for the golden heart which you wear about your neck,' and he pointed with an exaggeratedly long finger to my talisman which my mother had given to me before I went to war. Horrified I hid my charm and was completely paralyzed. Then I tore it off, stamped on it with my feet and woke up screaming. It was terrible."

This dream revealed the way he saw himself in the world. His friends are in reality dangerous enemies. They know all the unscrupulous tricks of life, and they go after the most precious thing he possesses. They recognize his strongest weakness and are happy to hurt him.

In association with this, he talked about his carefree youth as if it were a lost paradise. His parents treated him with loving understanding and complete confidence. He never had to lie or cheat. His eyes gleamed when he talked about this sheltered period in his life. When he was 10, he was sent to a boys' school, where one day he broke a plate. He went at once to the headmistress to apologize for the accident. She was furious and even accused him of having broken several other plates as well as this particular one. When the boy protested, he was confined to his room and was told that he could not leave it until he confessed. In his despair he wrote a letter to his parents which he smuggled out through a teacher of whom he was fond and in whom he had complete confidence. The teacher betrayed his confidence by taking this letter to the headmistress. Shortly afterwards permission to leave his room and was told later on that his parents had written that he should be punished severely if he ever lied again.

This was his first and probably most decisive experience which became the source of his warped attitude towards life. He became suspicious, started telling lies and did not laugh as heartily or as frequently as before. Similar unfortunate experiences of betrayal of trust occurred in his college and army years. On the one hand he still had the innate tendency to confide in and meet people openly and warmly, on the other hand there was the overwhelming subconscious warning: "You have had enough bad experiences. People are mean. The world is cruel. You must shield yourself if you don't want to get wounded. Don't have faith in anyone or anything and always be ready for a fight."

As he grew more tense, it became increasingly difficult to make close friends. He chose girls only far below his level so that when the relationship became too emotionally involved, he could get rid of them easier. However, once he was attracted to and became acquainted with a fine girl with a strong personality. She awoke all his latent faithful and confidential tendencies. Hence the actual conflict, a fight between the original desire for faithful devotion and the acquired fear of losing himself. He loved the girl as a possible fulfillment of his deepest desires, but at the same time he hated her as the cause of his insecurity and nervous restlessness.

This destructive emotional tension caused all his difficulties. His failure in tennis was only one manifestation of a general tension. The essential cause of his failures was the early original experience of loss of faith. With such a deeper understanding of himself, he slowly regained the self-confident and warm-hearted personality, which in reality he had.

This case illustrates how careful we must be not to destroy the faith of a child by even the smallest things. What we believe to be small, looms very often so large in a child's conception, and may be directly responsible for seriously involved complications of adult life.

Odd Fact

Checking out of a Rochester, N. Y. hospital after a siege of pneumonia, a 108-year-old Civil War veteran had only one complaint—the medicine given him during his illness had dulled his appetite.

SPREADING the NEWS...

By Howard Statham

ONE EVENING LAST WEEK while my wife was reading over my shoulder, she exclaimed, "Oh, I know him!" and pointed to a paragraph in a recent issue of The Argonaut which began, "Dr. and Mrs. Otto Barkan, who left the end of April for Europe, will return to San Francisco in July."

"He's the doctor my mother used to go to to get her eyes popped," explained my wife, and sure enough, the item went on to say that in addition to visiting the doctor's ninety-four year old mother in Montreux, Switzerland, and Mrs. Barkan's relatives in Stockholm, the couple would visit in northern Italy and in London, where Dr. Barkan would attend an international eye conference.

Now, in all the time I've known my mother-in-law, she never once has struck me as the sort of person who would go around having her eyes popped, whatever that may mean. She looks strictly 20-20 to me, and eye-popping sounds pretty drastic for a person of her acute vision. It may be some common experience that everyone but me has gone through at one time or another, but if it is, I'll be disappointed. Anyhow, I didn't ask my wife to explain the procedure, feeling as I did that it couldn't possibly be anything nearly as interesting as what flashed through my mind at the time.

VISITING IN CARMEL at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Von Bredow are Mrs. V. B.'s brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Clark, and their son Dick, of Medford, Oregon. Ordinarily, people from Medford, Oregon, visiting in Carmel would be nothing more than people from Medford, Oregon, visiting in Carmel. But not in this case--or not in Mrs. Clark's case, anyway.

All persons who read to the end of this paragraph and feel that they would like to meet the lady personally are hereby informed that an introduction can probably be arranged through either Ernie Von Bredow at the Nielsen Bros. Market or Mrs. Von Bredow at the Hour Glass. If you ask them nicely they'll undoubtedly be very happy to introduce you to the only person that they, or I, have ever heard of who can't hear a thing when she's wearing dark glasses. And the only person, for that matter, who can't wear earrings because they make her knee-caps hot.

"THE FLYING SAUCERS ARE REAL" DEPARTMENT--Dana, the perfume distilling outfit of Paris and New York who gave the world Tabu some years back, has come up with a new smell that should be out of this world--if it lives up to its advertising.

In almost any magazine that carries $40-an-ounce-perfume ads these days you can find a photograph of two eyes leering out of the dark and a bit of potent prose that will inform you that in VOO-DOO--Perfume of the Night, the public is being offered "two compelling perfume essences entirely new to the senses," that "distinguish the wearer of Voodoo as a beautiful visitor from a more beautiful world than this." It was probably just an oversight on the ad writer's part that the exact location of this more beautiful world and information on how to get there was omitted.

A NEW COLLECTION of Charles Addams' cartoons has been announced for publication this fall, the third installment of a fine, gruesome series that so far has produced "Drawn and Quartered" and "Addams and Evil." Admirers of the New Yorker artist's work can sometimes be pretty violent in their praise of him, but very few of even his most ardent fans know the true extent of Addams' influence. Many of the cartoons depict scenes from the domestic life of the inhabitants of a creaky, run-down, spider-filled 19th century mansion: a pig-like father, a good-looking but vampirish mother, a spindly little girl, a bloated and fiendish little boy, a somewhat hairy grandmother who is usually kept locked up in the attic, and a Frankenstein-type monster who does odd jobs about the house.

Several years ago one cartoon showed the father playing "This Little Piggy" with his daughter at bedtime and being left in a quandary, along with the reader, when he came to her sixth toe. Some friends of some friends of mine (names on request) who were awaiting the arrival of a child at the time, admired the cartoon greatly. They showed it to all their friends who came to call and everyone had a big laugh. And then, a few months later, they showed all their friends a fine, bouncing baby boy who had six toes on each foot and six fingers on each hand, and who, when last heard of, was showing an early interest in the violin.

So if you know someone who's going to have a baby, and you want to have a little fun... Worth a try, anyhow. The new collection will be called "Charles Addams' Monster Rally."

227 GRADUATE FROM ARMY LANGUAGE SCHOOL

Two hundred twenty-seven officers and men of the Army, Marine Corps and Air Force were graduated at the Army Language School on Friday.

Colonel C. H. Bamwell, commandant of the Army Language School, presented the diplomas and congratulated the graduates on having satisfactorily completed the course of instruction.

Many of the graduates, stationed at the school during the past 12 months now will depart for overseas assignments.

An academic furlough is scheduled from June 23 to July 4 for most of the remaining classes at the school. All classes will reconvene on July 5 and additional classes will be activated shortly thereafter with the arrival of approximately 300 officers and men.

FORBES STUDENTS GIVE RECITAL

The Carmel studio of Robert M. Forbes was filled with the families and friends of his piano students when they gave three one hour recital programs recently. Those who played on the evening program were Toby Sampson, Paul Neumann, Charles Solomon, Delora Sharpe, Ann Thoeni and Sandra Solomon, of Carmel; Lanny Doolittle, of Monterey; Barbara Rusch, Billy Lunde, Linda Lee, Jean Hurlbert and Dorothy Hutchings, of Pacific Grove.

The program included Nancy Nelson, Lucy Lynn Freeman, Colleen Farrell, William Eaton, Wayne Martin and Barbara Holden, of Pacific Grove; Peter Solt and Nancy Brown, of Carmel; Sylvia Giem, of Carmel Valley; Jack Snyder and Priscilla Hernandez, of Salinas, and Howard Siever, of Monterey.

Others were Nancy Nichols and Gloria Neumann, of Monterey; Yvonne Scettrini, of Salinas; Susan White, Ann Hicks, Susan Lawrence and Patty Finley, of Carmel. Sally Spurr, also of Carmel, was missed by those present as she was unable to play because of illness. At the conclusion of the programs the punch bowl became the center of interest.

PLANNERS APPROVE CARMEL ORDINANCE AMENDMENT

The Carmel Planning Commission Wednesday unanimously approved an amendment to the city ordinance code relating to apartment and lodging house construction requirements in the business district. The law requires provision of offstreet parking facilities in all new apartment buildings for 66 2/3 percent of the tenants.

In other business the planners okayed a 12-unit apartment building by Eri Richardson, which is to be built at the southeast corner of Junipero and Third. The plans had been refused at an earlier meeting when the Planning Commission decided the building presented the mass of a five-story building. Changes in the design of the building prompted the body to approve the plans at the Wednesday meeting.

The planners also granted tentative approval of plans for a one-story business building by John Keuffer between Fifth and Sixth on San Carlos.

GAIL FRATIES

GAIL FRATIES WINS LITERARY AWARD

Gail Fraties, son of Carmel's Chief of Police Roy Fraties, has been awarded the 1950 Alice C. Cooper Literary Award for five poems and two short stories he submitted in competition with students from 50 California junior colleges. The contest was held under the auspices of Alpha Gamma Sigma, a statewide honor society.

The award of $100 was presented to Fraties at the graduation exercises of Monterey Peninsula Junior College last week.

Fraties was also given a life membership in Alpha Gamma Sigma for the high scholastic average he has maintained in his studies. His name has been placed on the society's state honor roll, as well as on the scholarship plaque at the college.

Recently married in Carmel were Miss Judith Dorway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Garfield Dorway, of Omaha, Nebraska, and Thomas Witter Page, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Page, of Carmel.

The bridegroom is the nephew of Dean and John Witter, of San Francisco; Guy Witter, Charles Witter, Mrs. Henry Debost, of Paris; Mrs. J. F. Van Loben Sels, Mrs. Elizabeth Stroul, Mrs. Ray Shumaker and George Page. His sister Peggy lives in Paris.

The couple will reside in Berkeley, following a wedding trip to Yosemite.

CARMEL VALLEY NOTES

A round of parties added up to a gala last week in the valley. The gaiety started off with a charming luncheon party given by Mrs. Malcolm Woods at the Rancho Del Monte Country Club.

The country club was also the scene of a luncheon given by Mrs. Ray Rudolph for officers and board members of St. Angelas Altar Society of Pacific Grove. Guests included Mrs. William Golden, Mrs. George De Lorimer, Mrs. Reginald Foster, Mrs. Fred Fry and Mrs. L. W. Cerney.

On Friday night the Dudley Swims celebrated their birthdays with a barbecue in the patio at Holman's Guest Ranch. Helping the Swims celebrate were Mrs. Charles Booth, of Beverly Hills, a houseguest of the Swims, Mrs. Helen Tarrant and Peggy Porter Marquard.

There were other "happy birthdays" in the Holman's colorful patio that evening as Mrs. Holman was also feted with a cake and candles. Among family members present were the Gordon Knoles and Vernon Hurds.

On Sunday evening the Paul Porters were hosts at a cocktail party at their Rancho Del Monte home on the hill. Thirty guests assembled to greet the guest of honor, Barbara's mother, Mrs. Delberta Manners, of Piedmont.

Peggy Porter Marquard was hostess at a Sunday night dinner party honoring her house guest, Mrs. Helen Tarrant, of Los Angeles. Enjoying buffet supper were the Dudley Swims, Mrs. Charles Booth, the Herb Brooks, Bruno Franek, Lt. Commander and Mrs. V. L. Pendegraff and the Steve McNeils.

Incidentally, the McNeils are charming valley newcomers. Steve writes those refreshing, young love stories you read in the Saturday Evening Post.

The younger set was entertained

when Willie and Freddie Funke gave a swimming party at the country club, followed by supper.

Also entertaining at the club were the Wesley Kergans who invited a group of friends for Sunday buffet beneath the red and white striped canopy.

MARRIED IN WALNUT CREEK

Miss Beverly Dowgiallo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Dowgiallo, of Carmel, and Toland Dowd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Dowd, of Carmel, were married Monday in Walnut Creek. The young couple plan to live in Carmel.

OPEN CARMEL WORK CENTER JULY FIRST

The Carmel Work Center, an outlet for ceramics, weaving, wood-carving and other handwork of Monterey Peninsula artisans, will hold its opening day on July 1 at the Seven Arts Court, Carmel, according to George W. Beeman, of Pebble Beach, the founder of the project.

The aim of the Carmel Work Center, according to Mr. Beeman, is to gain for the Monterey Peninsula an international reputation for its arts and crafts. Mr. Beeman has placed Mrs. Glenn Clairmonte in charge of interviewing local craftsmen for selection of work to go in display in the shop.

"We are calling all craftsmen," she said, "and hope they will get in touch with us at the shop July 1, even if we have missed contacting any of them."

Mr. Beeman expressed his hope that the Carmel Work Center will create a national market for work developed in this area. He went on to say, "The start of this movement will be rather slow as products must be examined carefully. We mean to select only the outstanding work of this area. When the time comes that the organization shows a profit, a co-operative arrangement will be made

The Golden Bough Players will lead off the summer season on July 28 at Sunset Auditorium with the Tennessee Williams play, "The Glass Menagerie." with the craftsmen. In the meantime, all work accepted for sale will be bought for cash at the usual dealer's discount."

Mr. Beeman, who has many years of merchandising experience in the East, started the project to relieve artists of the necessity of marketing their own goods.

TO CELEBRATE 100-YEAR CALIFORNIA BIRTHDAY AT STATE FAIR

A festive eleven-day birthday party to celebrate California's admission to the Union 100 years ago will be given by the California State Fair, from August 21 through September 10.

Amidst the gaiety of the birthday party, the fair, through its exhibits, will show hundreds of thousands of visitors the tremendous developments, in scores of fields, that California has made in the past century.

Work has started on a great birthday cake replica in front of the entrance to the Agriculture Building. The giant cake will be 15 feet in diameter, 13 feet in height, and decorated with 100 candles and small figures of pioneers. Hidden in the interior will be a music box.

The cake will revolve slowly on a turntable with a music box playing birthday celebration tunes
